

Writing in the Health Professions

Annotated Bibliography

Have you been assigned annotated bibliography for your healthcare paper and you do not understand what it is? Do not worry! Read this article and you will get adequate information about it. I will give a how much is an essay in this article that will enable you to find out about it and how it is written. Most of the understudies from healthcare survey are assigned this kind of task from their professors to determine their level of research and understanding about analyzing a published work at how much is an essay.

Several understudies lack understanding about writing an annotated bibliography and eventually they get lower grades from their professors. Writing an annotated bibliography is a technical task and requires great writing abilities to write it. Some understudies even consult a paper writing service to finish their work, however, doing so may not end well for them on the off chance that they pay less attention to the selection of such a service. There are several such services online and before placing an order, understudies ought to guarantee the quality of content to avoid any trouble.

An annotated bibliography is novel in relation to the one added at the finish of the paper. It contains a detailed account of the published work that you decide to use in your paper. It can be of any source like a book, journal, article, or website and you can use any formatting style for this reason. Understudies who lack a legitimate understanding of writing an annotated bibliography can consult any Essay Writer For Me to get an idea in this regard.

A healthcare annotated bibliography contains two parts, one the detailed information about the source in a particular format like APA or MLA, and second, a summary of the source and its utilization in your paper at talented writers.

Following is a sample of annotated bibliography, kindly have a desire to find out about it.

Part one is the detailed source information in APA style (Chirico et al., 2020).

Chirico, F., Nucera, G., and Magnavita, N. (2020). Coronavirus: Protecting Healthcare Workers is a priority. Infection Control and Hospital Epidemiology, 41(9), 1117-1117.
<https://doi.org/10.1017/ice.2020.148>

The second part contains a detailed summary of the article that you have decided for your paper and why it is important for your research. It will be according to the following through reliable need someone to need someone to write my essay

This article is written in a my essay writer to the editor by Chinese healthcare workers who had raised concerns about spreading the Covid-19 infection in healthcare workers because of lack of awareness and personal protective gear. The authors of this article have acknowledged that it is concerning for them also that an increasing number of healthcare workers are getting infected because of the infection in hospitals.

In Italy alone, the percentage of doctors and paramedical staff who have been infected is ten times higher than that of Chinese. The authors have distinguished some of the reasons behind this mass level transmission of the infection among healthcare workers leading among them is asymptomatic patients who do not show any symptoms of the infection and thus are infecting many. The second reason that the authors of this article have featured is that coronavirus transmits higher in indoor settings. Therefore, the article recommends separating the hospitals from emergency response centers to avoid the mass level spread of infection among medical professionals journals at i need someone to write my essay for me

This article is relevant to my research because it contains firsthand information about the spread of the infection among healthcare workers in China and Italy and has featured its reasons. Using this information in my paper at CollegeEssay, I will actually want to give direct data related to the transmission of Coronavirus among healthcare workers and how we can effectively save them from getting the infection while performing their obligations.